CPC Anti-Abortion Pamphlets Targeting Women

Choosing what to do when you are in the middle of an unplanned pregnancy is very hard. It may seem like no one knows how you feel and you are all alone. You may be getting pressured to make a choice you don’t want to make. You can get help, though. You can call counselors in your local area on the 24-hour helpline:

Why does it hurt?

Abortion is so harmful to a woman’s emotional health simply because it is unnatural. A woman knows it is not right to end the life of her child. She knows she should give birth to the baby and love and care for it in every way possible. She knows the life inside her is part of her. Abortion goes against every natural inclination the woman has to love and protect her baby. She knows it is wrong, and the regret will be with her the rest of her life.

Facts about abortion risks taken from:
ABORTION AND CHILDREN

Abortion is not something that wipes away a problem and leaves everything as happy as before the pregnancy. Abortion takes a serious emotional toll on the would-be mother. This emotional and psychological pain creates strain in future relationships. The relationships that are hardest hit are those between a mother and a child. Past abortions can cause strain, stress, and emotional discontent between a mother and her child. Abortion can be the worst thing for a mother, or someone who’ll be a mother someday, to do to her family.

“While all forms of pregnancy loss can cause emotional distress that can impact future parenting, the available research indicates that emotional responses after induced abortion are more likely to go unresolved and to persist for a longer time period.”

ABORTION & MOTHERS

Almost 2/3 of women have one or more children at the time of their abortion. Studies have found that the abortion will significantly affect the parenting of the mother. After the abortion, the children will have a mother who has a higher risk of suicide, a higher chance of mental health disorders, and a higher probability of not providing a supportive home. The risks of abortion don’t only affect the mother. They also affect the existing and future children of that mother.

“Abortion is a cause of lasting emotional damage that can create problems, issues, and tensions between the mother and existing or future children.”

“If you choose abortion, it will be much harder to be a good parent to your existing or future children.”

If you have an abortion, it does not mean you will be a bad parent, it means you will have to work much harder to be a good parent. If you have not had an abortion, stop and think about your current or future children. They need a mother who can give her best. They need a mother who is not fighting against the pain of abortion. They need a mother who chose a different option. Take the first step to being a great parent; choose any option but abortion.
